

EMERGENCY RESPONSE TO ACTIVE SHOOTERS

When an emergency strikes, every second counts and knowing what to do could save lives. In the wake of the recent events in Tucson, Arizona, the attached information, "How to Respond to an Active Shooter" created by the Department of Homeland Security, will help prepare you should a similar situation occur. Please feel free to distribute and post this material as warranted.

Guard Management, Inc. offers a series of client-based security awareness educational sessions that can be customized to suit your specific needs. These trainings are taught by senior members of our Operations Team to both the security staff and any employee, tenant or resident who would benefit from attending.

Client-Based Security Educational Topics include:

Fire Drills: GMI experts are trained in coordinating, performing and recording the results of fire and evacuation drills procedures.

Fire Life Safety Training: In addition to having access to Fire Life Safety materials, as a result of our close working relationships with fire officials, we can arrange for knowledgeable speakers from local fire departments to present at your event.

Floor Warden Training: GMI professionals are available to attend any or all of your floor warden trainings to speak on the security related subject of your choice.

Receptionist Training: During a GMI catered Lunch & Learn, Receptionists and Administrative Staff who work in the building are introduced to basic security screenings and emergency response techniques.

Violence at the Workplace Seminar: All GMI experts have received comprehensive training in preventing and responding to workplace violence. This course is very popular with Human Resource Management because of the extensive information covered.

Personal Safety Training: GMI Management will cater a Lunch and Learn demonstrating personal safety techniques that offer protection while in public.

Vehicle Safety Training: This training provides basic information on vehicle theft and vehicle burglary prevention.

Security Audit: A Certified Protection Professional will conduct a complete security audit of your property and make recommendations to improve internal security measures.
